OA IN ARMENIA

- 2007

Armenia's National Academy of Sciences, supported by the Open Society Assistance Foundation, launched two high-quality OA journals: the Armenian Journal of Mathematics and the Armenian Journal of Physics.

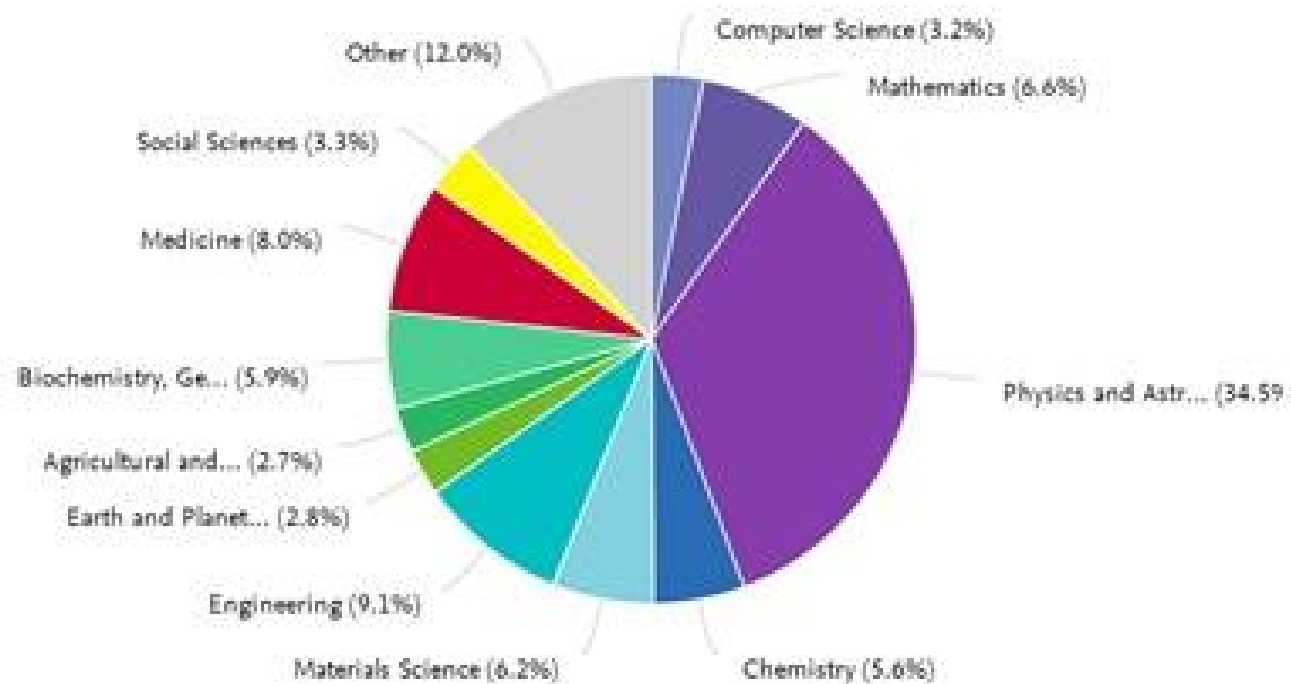

- 2010

as awareness about the value of OA spread, 20 major scholarly journals were converted into open access. The journals cover the period from 1940, and include over 2,000 issues with more than 32,000 articles.

COPYRIGHT REFORM IN ARMENIA

- Prof. Kenneth Crews (University of California) and Teresa Hackett (EIFL copyright coordinator)
- EIFL has been engaged in copyright work in Armenia since 2012, supporting a national advocacy campaign to review the current copyright law (2006) and to make library-friendly recommendations for the new law.
- The new draft copyright law was published in 2017.
- The legislative process was expected to be completed by the end of 2018.
- EIFL and the Electronic Library Consortium of Armenia (ELCA) will make interventions as needed.

A dramatic landscape in Armenia featuring ancient stone ruins under a stormy sky. The scene is dominated by a large, dark, and heavy sky filled with swirling grey and white clouds. In the foreground, a low stone wall made of rough-hewn rocks runs across the frame, with tall green grass and some small wildflowers growing between the stones. To the left, a well-preserved ancient stone building with a gabled roof and arched windows stands prominently. In the background, more ruins are visible, and a small village with white-washed houses is nestled in a green valley. The overall mood is one of mystery and historical significance.
